

Independent Medical Examination (IME) – Employee’s Ability to Resume Work or Employment

Instructions: An Independent Medical Examination (IME) can only be conducted either by the employee’s primary treating physician, or a qualified doctor authorized by the Commission. An IME may be requested on certain workmen’s compensation matters. This IME form is particularly for an evaluation to determine the employee’s capacity and ability to resume work or employment. The Commission may direct an employee to furnish an IME, or the employee upon on his or her initiative. If an IME is being seek, the employee must provide this form to the designated examining doctor or primary treating physician.

It is the responsibility of the employee to facilitate all scheduling with the evaluating doctor for an examination and for such doctor to assist the employee on the requirement. The evaluating physician or doctor has 10-days after such examination to furnish his or her evaluation. The physician is also required to enclose his full evaluation report together with this form upon submission. Any cost associated in furnishing such evaluation must be geared directly to the requestor.
